it has become the duty of the Democrats to learn whether it is not their duty to change grounds also, and do all they can to compet President HARRISON to call an extra session. No good general waits for his enemy to order up relaforcements before attacking him. Whether the Democrats desire to defeat the unholy schemes of the Republicans or to perfect and push through measures of their own, it may become their pottey as party men to force the House of Representatives to be organized as soon as possible. It is wise to learn from your enemy. If the Republicans are airsid of an extra session, theo the Democrats ought to "skirmish for position" and endeavor to compel an extra If by filibustering the Cowles bill be de-

New Hampshire's New Senator. The Constitution of the United States provides that the State legislatures shall elect. United States senators, but does not provide when they shall be elected. This omission to specify how long before a vacancy was going to occur a senator might be elected to fill it afforded some of the State legislatures the opportunity to elect senators two, three, or four years before the expiration of the terms of the senators whose places were to be filled by the new elections. As Congress was, however, empowered to change the Stafe regulations fixing the time, place, and manner of electing United States senators that body exercised this power and put an end to the wrong of electing senators too soon. The act of Congress requires them to be chosen by the legislatures elected hat before the expiration of the terms of the incumbent sens-
